RE: RONDO ENERGY THERMAL BATTERY PILOT PROPOSAL UPDATE

IN THE MATTER OF XCEL ENERGY'S COMPETITIVE RESOURCE ACQUISITION
PROCESS FOR UP TO 800 MEGAWATTS OF FIRM DISPATCHABLE GENERATION

IN THE MATTER OF XCEL ENERGY'S 2024-2040 UPPER MIDWEST INTEGRATED RESOURCE PLAN

DOCKET NOS. E002/CN-23-212 AND E002/RP-24-67

Dear Ms. Bergman:

Northern States Power Company, doing business as Xcel Energy, respectfully submits this update on the Rondo Energy thermal battery pilot proposal to the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission, as required by Order Point 23 of the Commission's April 21, 2025 ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT WITH MODIFICATIONS (Order) in the above-noted dockets, as follows:

Xcel must continue exploring options for a thermal battery with Rondo Energy and must file a pilot proposal by December 31, 2025, or in the alternative, an explanation as to why a pilot proposal would not be reasonable. If Xcel proposes a pilot project with Rondo Energy, the project must be sufficiently large to provide learning opportunities for scalability of the thermal battery technology and potential for optimization of any renewable resources that provide energy for storage in the thermal battery.

In summary, Xcel Energy is not proceeding with a pilot project for a thermal battery with Rondo Energy at this time. After extensive evaluation and collaboration, we have determined that a pilot project is not reasonable under current market and technology conditions.

Portions of this letter are marked "Not-Public" as they contain information the Company considers to be trade secret data as defined by Minn. Stat. § 13.37(1)(b).

PUBLIC DOCUMENT—NOT-PUBLIC DATA HAS BEEN EXCISED

This data includes confidential negotiation details, pricing and other contractual terms. The information has independent economic value from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable by, other parties who could obtain economic value from its disclosure or use.

A. Background and Actions Taken

Since August 2024, Xcel Energy has actively explored the feasibility of a thermal battery pilot with Rondo Energy. Rondo Energy submitted an application in the 800 MW firm dispatchable resource acquisition proceeding, Docket No. E002/CN-23-212, for a combined heat and power solution that would provide electricity back to the grid while supplying steam for use with industrial applications or building heating. The Company collaborated with Rondo Energy to address bid requirements and project attributes, submitted a U.S. Department of Energy grant proposal (which was not awarded), and conducted extensive searches for steam customers whose demand profiles could support a pilot of sufficient scale. Multiple project configurations and siting options were evaluated in an effort to identify a cost-effective solution. In addition, we met with the Department of Commerce on more than one occasion prior to this filing to share progress and discuss key challenges.

B. Key Barriers Identified

Despite the efforts described above, Xcel Energy encountered a series of persistent barriers that have ultimately prevented the development of a viable pilot project. These barriers are most evident in two important areas – affordability and scalability – which are discussed in detail below. Together, these factors have shaped the Company’s assessment and decision regarding the Rondo Energy thermal battery pilot.

1. Affordability Considerations

Affordability remains a central concern for the Rondo Energy thermal battery pilot. As shown in Table 1 below, each project iteration was downsized due to the inability to identify a steam customer with large, consistent, year-round demand.

The largest configuration considered at 51 megawatts electric (MWe) / 40 MW thermal (MWt) was not feasible, and smaller designs failed to deliver meaningful learning opportunities for scalability. Further, the estimated capital cost for the largest configuration was approximately [PROTECTED DATA BEGINS PROTECTED DATA ENDS], with subsequent smaller designs still ranging from [PROTECTED DATA BEGINS PROTECTED DATA ENDS]. The economics of the project are further challenged by the fact that electrified steam produced by the Rondo heat battery is more expensive than steam generation for natural gas, even when assuming competitive electricity pricing of $20/MWh. The Company evaluated business models where the steam revenues from an industrial customer could reduce the cost of the project and/or reduce the impact to electric customers. However, steam revenue was insufficient to offset the aforementioned high capital costs, and steam sales are not a direct benefit to electric customers or the grid..

Table 1
Rondo Pilot Design Progression and Cost Summary

Design Iteration	Size (MWe/MWt)	Key Barriers to Advancement	Estimated Total Cost (million)
			[PROTECTED DATA BEGINS]
Initial (2.0)	51/40	Lacked project information on permitting, interconnection, land cost, equipment replacement, or steam contract
2.1	25/20	No customer with sufficient steam demand; high cost of steam; surplus steam wasted; low utilization
2.2	12/20	Minimal cost reduction from downsizing; reduced benefit to electric customers; steam cost still high even at $20/MWh LMPs; seasonal operation issues
3.6	3.6/13	Configured entirely for steam user, not overall electric customers; only available for storage during summer; still too expensive

PROTECTED DATA ENDS]

To provide additional context on affordability, Table 2 below compares the Rondo pilot configuration to other emerging battery energy storage system (BESS) projects – the Sherco Form Long Duration Energy Storage project and the Capacity*Connect BESS. This comparison highlights the significantly higher capital costs and cost of capacity associated with the Rondo technology.

Table 2
Pilot BESS Comparison

Project	Size	Capital Cost	Cost of Capacity	BESS Technology	Source
[PROTECTED DATA BEGINS]
Sherco Form Long Duration Energy Storage	10 MW			Iron-air	May 1, 2023 Letter, Docket No. E002/M-23-119
Capacity*Connect BESS	200 MW			TBD lithium-ion	October 2, 2025 Petition and MPUC Information Request No. 6, Docket No. E002/M-25-378
Rondo Battery	20 MWe/25 MWt			Thermal

PROTECTED DATA ENDS]

As shown above, the Rondo pilot's cost of capacity is substantially higher than the estimated capital costs of both the Sherco Form and Capacity*Connect projects – and its overall capital cost remains elevated even at smaller scales. These comparisons underscore the affordability challenges and the difficulty in scaling the Rondo technology to a level that would provide meaningful benefits to the electric grid and our overall customers.

2. Scalability Limitations

Scalability is also a significant challenge for the Rondo pilot. Fundamentally, the Rondo heat battery technology is tailored for industrial steam customers with specific, high-volume, and consistent thermal needs, rather than for integration into utility-scale grid storage application. This customer-centric design means that the sizing and operational profile of any installation are dictated by the requirements of individual steam users, not by the needs of the electric system or grid reliability objectives.

As a result, the business model is anchored in steam sales, which do not provide direct or proportional benefits to electric customers or the broader grid. The limited pool of potential steam customers with sufficient demand further restricts opportunities for replication or expansion. Even if a suitable customer were identified, the revenue generated from steam sales is insufficient to offset the substantial capital and operational costs, and electrified steam remains more expensive than natural gas.

PUBLIC DOCUMENT—NOT-PUBLIC DATA HAS BEEN EXCISED

From a technical perspective, the Rondo system does not currently support optimization of renewable resources for storage at scale. The available renewable energy within the project footprint is not adequate to reliably charge the thermal battery to its full potential, and there is no mechanism to ensure that charging is sourced exclusively from renewables. This lack of flexibility limits the project's ability to contribute to decarbonization goals or grid modernization efforts.

Moreover, the complexity and cost of integrating the Rondo system into existing utility infrastructure are considerable. Balance of plant costs are substantial, and the high charge loads complicate interconnection and grid management. Each successive project iteration has resulted in smaller configurations, further diminishing the opportunity for meaningful learning about scalability or system-wide optimization.

In summary, the inability to align project sizing with electric system needs, the absence of scalable market demand, and the technical constraints on renewable integration collectives prevent the Rondo pilot from serving as a replicable or expandable solution for utility-scale energy storage. Even under favorable electricity pricing scenarios, the economics do not support broader deployment, and the project cannot be scaled to deliver significant benefits to electric customers or the grid.

C. Conclusion and Future Considerations

Given these findings, Xcel Energy has determined that proceeding with a pilot project with Rondo Energy is not reasonable at this time. The lack of a sufficiently large steam customer, the high cost of the technology, and the inability to scale the project to benefit electric customers and the grid collectively render the pilot infeasible. The Rondo technology may be viable for industrial electrification or demand response applications at the customer level, but not as a utility-scale solution. We remain open to future opportunities should market conditions, policy support, or technological advancements create a more favorable environment for deployment.
