REPLY COMMENTS

I. INTRODUCTION

Otter Tail Power Company (Otter Tail Power or Company) submits these Reply Comments in response to the Minnesota Public Utilities Commission’s (Commission) October 31, 2024, Notice of Initial Comments in the above-referenced docket.

II. COMMENTS

Otter Tail Power’s primary concern and the focus of these Reply Comments is the Department of Commerce’s (Department) January 29, 2025 Comments wherein the Department proposed for the first time “a transition to hourly tracking and matching of energy and carbon-free credit trading...”

Otter Tail Power has joined other utilities in opposing the Department’s proposal for the reasons set forth in Joint Reply Comments of the Aligned Utilities filed by Great River Energy. The Company incorporates the points raised in the Joint Reply Comments into these Reply Comments. As noted in the Joint Reply Comments, nothing in the statutory text or history of the Carbon Free Standard (CFS) as set forth in Minn. Stat. § 216B.1691 supports the adoption of the hourly compliance regime proposed by the Department. The statute’s text and history of building upon the framework of the Renewable Energy Standard (RES) all point to an annualized, not hourly compliance metric.

Beyond this point, an hourly compliance structure will negatively impact Minnesota customers by unnecessarily increasing energy and compliance costs. The negative impacts to Otter Tail Power customers arising from the application of an hourly compliance structure are not difficult to anticipate. Assuming the timely addition of the carbon free resources authorized and ordered by the Commission in the Company’s most recent Integrated Resource Planning (IRP) docket,¹ the Company will be well positioned to be compliant with the CFS 80 percent standard by 2030, based on an annual compliance metric, with minimal impact to Minnesota ratepayers.

Otter Tail Power anticipates that by 2030 it will have 400 MW of wind and 400 MW of solar available to serve Minnesota customers. Given the inherent variability of wind and solar generation resources, there will be hours of the year when the Company is very long on carbon free generation compared to load, and some hours when the Company will be very short. Otter Tail Power's Minnesota peak load is roughly 450 MW, with an average load closer to 350 MW over the course of all 8,760 hours of the year. During hours when the sun is shining and the wind is blowing, the Company's Minnesota carbon free generation will exceed load by potentially hundreds of MWs. Conversely, during hours when wind and solar generation is not available or minimal (typically nighttime hours), the Company's Minnesota load will exceed carbon free generation by potentially hundreds of MWs. With this backdrop, the Company would need to adopt one or more of following mechanisms to comply with an hourly compliance standard, each and all of which would negatively impact our customers:

Purchasing Energy Attribute Certificates (EACs)

Otter Tail Power is unaware of an EAC price forecast making it hard to quantify the potential impact to ratepayers if an hourly compliance metric is adopted. However, logic dictates that in hours when the Company is long on carbon free generation the same will be true for other MISO carbon free generators, which will drive down the value of the Company's excess EACs. Conversely, in hours when the Company's carbon free generation for Minnesota is short of our Minnesota load the Company will need to purchase EACs --- as will other MISO carbon free generators, driving up the costs of EACs.

Battery Storage

An alternative to purchasing EACs would be to store the Company's carbon free energy in a battery (or other energy storage device) during hours of excess and discharge the battery in hours of carbon free generation shortage. This concept may seem simple, but there are multiple hurdles to overcome prior to its implementation. As an initial matter the Commission would have to confirm that energy stored and discharged would meet CFS requirements and qualify as carbon free generation such as allowing EACs associated with hours when the storage is charging can be credited to the hours when the storage discharges. The more daunting issue is that charging and discharging of the battery would have to perfectly follow the net carbon free position of the utility utilizing the battery. In other words, the utility would have to charge the battery directly from a carbon free generation resource only in hours where carbon free generation is more than load and discharge the battery at a level that matches the shortfall in hours where load exceeds carbon free generation. This would be extraordinarily challenging from an operational standpoint and would also likely violate the Independent Market Monitor's (IMM) rules on physical and economic withholding.² Under current IMM rules, a charged battery would have to be made available to the market at a reasonable price and discharge when the Mid-Continent Independent System Operator (MISO) calls on the battery to discharge. The amount of storage necessary to address these concerns would require significant over-build and significant cost to our customers.

Nuclear

A third option would be to add baseload carbon free generation to meet the Company's Minnesota's energy needs all hours of the year. The most accessible and tested technology available today is nuclear. Although this option is technically feasible, it is very unlikely to be an option in the near and mid-term term for Otter Tail Power given the moratorium in Minnesota as well as the high cost of constructing new nuclear facilities, particularly for a small utility.

In short, an hourly compliance construct as proposed by the Department risks significant negative customer impacts and leaves utilities like Otter Tail Power with limited means to mitigate this harm. These challenges demonstrate that even if the Commission construed the CFS to permit an hourly compliance metric, there are sound and compelling reasons not to do so.

III. CONCLUSION

An hourly compliance construct as proposed by the Department is inconsistent with the statutory text and legislative history of the CFS and deviates sharply from the annual compliance metric utilities have used for years under the Renewable Energy Standard (now EETS). To the extent there are any benefits to be derived from an hourly compliance metric, those benefits simply do not outweigh the costs and risks to Minnesota ratepayers which are inherent in the Department's approach.
